ENOTECA 2006:MCCARTHY NOBEL RED VARIETALS FROM PIEDMONT, ITALY

by Lisa Wright

NEW YORK
March 24, 2006

It was a packed room on Tuesday, March 21, when Ed McCarthy led the second seminar in the Enoteca 2006 wine series. The topic was Noble Red Varietals from Piedmont and NorthWestern Italy, which might explain the enthusiasm.

McCarthy took his time with the wines, pointing out the distinguishing features of each and explaining, for example, the differences a few years of aging makes for a Barolo versus a Valtellina Superiore. Many choice wines were tasted, and all showed remarkably well:

Ed McCarthy is a wine writer and certified wine educator and consultant who has been a respected member of the wine scene for over 25 years. He is co-author of the very successful Wine for Dummies series which has been translated into 15 languages and, appropriately, as a leading authority on Champagne in the U.S., is author of Champagne for Dummies. Besides writing regularly for Wine Review Online, Beverage Media, and Nation's Restaurant News, McCarthy has written for Decanter and Quarterly Review of Wines.
